

DIRTY CLOTHES
ENTER
HERE

At the Laundromat

by Karen GoatKeeper

Copyright 2023 by the author

ISBN: 978-1-7346886-4-1

All rights reserved.

All text and illustrations are done by the author, Karen GoatKeeper. The text is in Georgia font. The book is printed and bound by IngramSpark.

Learn more about the author and read sample pages from her books at her website:
<http://www.goatkeeperspress.com>

Other Books By Karen GoatKeeper

Picture Book

Waiting For Fairies

The Little Spider

Fiction

Hopes, Dreams and Reality

Capri Capers

Dora's Story

Edwina

Running the Roads

Hazel Whitmore trilogy

1 Broken Promises

2 Old Promises

3 Mistaken Promises

Nonfiction

Exploring the Ozark Hills

My Ozark Home

For Love of Goats

Goat Games

The Pumpkin Project

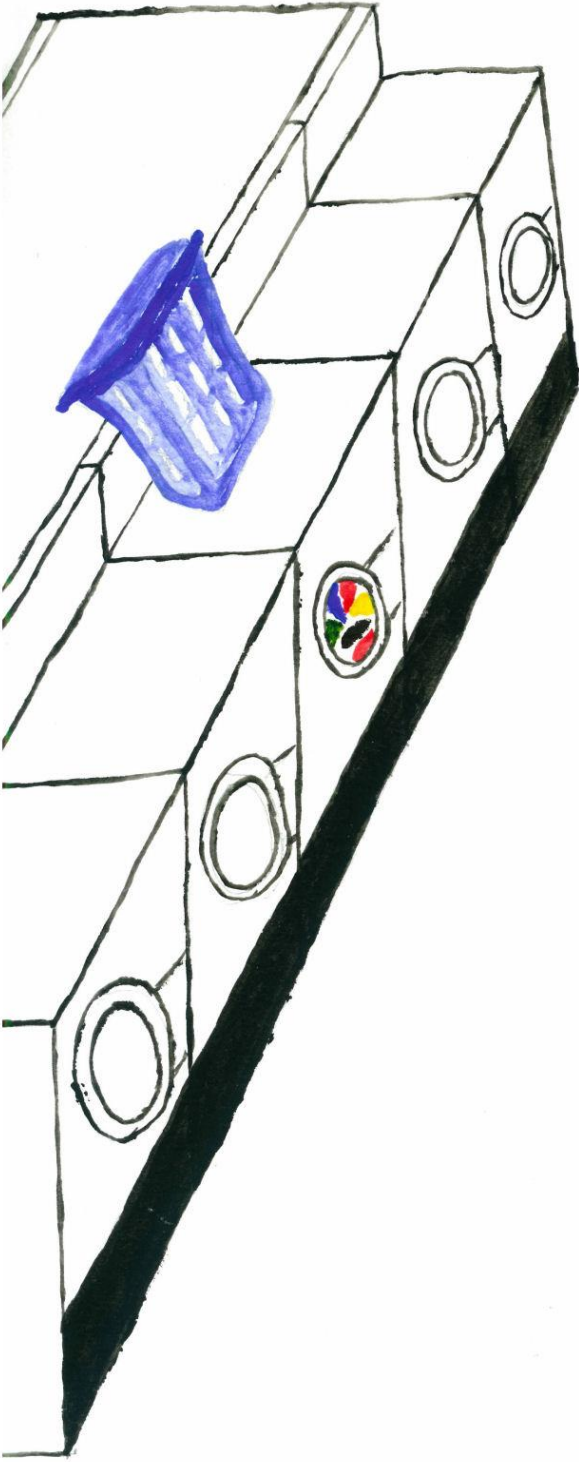

The City Water Project

Dedicated to
The McCluskeys
With Many Thanks

Have you been in a laundromat? People wash and dry their clothes in a laundromat.

Lots of other things can happen in a laundromat.

Dirty clothes, towels, blankets and sheets are laundry. The first thing people want to do when they come to a laundromat is put their laundry into a washer.

A laundromat has lots of washers. It has great big ones for comforters and big loads of laundry. Smaller blankets go into smaller washers. Small loads of clothes go into the smallest washers.

Some people bring animal blankets. Laundromat people hope they will put these in the bigger washers so all the hair will wash away.

There is a special tray for laundry soap, bleach and fabric softener.

Doing laundry at a laundromat costs money. Laundromat people must pay for water and electricity so people must pay for using the washers and dryers.

Using the washers and dryers costs quarters. A change machine lets people change bills into quarters.

A red light comes on if the change machine runs out of quarters, gets plugged up or the laundromat people go on vacation.